

Creativity and God is a sympathetic criticism of process theology. Neville shows that process thought is deeply mistaken to distinguish as it does so sharply between creativity and God and thus falls into both metaphysical and religious difficulties. Metaphysically, it cannot give an adequate account of temporality in God, and Lewis Ford's attempt to do so is analyzed here; nor can it give an account of eternity in God, and Charles Hartshorne's efforts are analyzed.

A Challenge to Process Theology, New Edition Robert C. Neville. I have quoted so extensively from Whitehead because these are among the most important. They affirm instead that God created our universe out of the chaotic remains of some prior Process theology affirms instead a doctrine of creation out of chaos (65). .. Perhaps this is rather a problem in cosmology than in pure metaphysics, .
