

Eretz Israel is the most contested country on earth. Hardly will a daily news brief in at least one major publicist omit mentioning Israel. Yet, against all odds, Israel each day becomes one of the most miss understood nations. In this light, the book Eretz Israel is fashioned to facilitate ones foundational insight into how the past stages of Jewish History starting from their forefather Abraham have shaped their modern approach to increasing global challenges. There are uncountable books on Israel, but a number of them mainly focus on only one stage or a few, an event or celebrated seasons of their history. This volume, though condensed, offers a systematic progression in fairer details of almost every epoch until the restoration of Jerusalem in 1967. It's readable in size, 250 pages of ordinary printed books. You should expect a dynamic revision from the call of Abraham of Ur; the Egyptian slavery; the conquests of Canaan under Joshua, Judges, Kings, until their Babylonian captivity at 604 B.C. Then, from the Second Temple construction to Jesus's days; the Zealot movements preceding Titus of 70 A.D, and the Jewish dispersion all over the earth until the end of the First World War when multiple aliyahs began. From 1948, Eretz Israel has regained marked media popularity which grows daily. There is an increasing global excitement over a People called "Palestinians" who claim Israel as their ancestral home, and yet it is quite obvious that the only ancient history of Palestine ever recorded concerns Israel. So who are the modern Palestinians, where did they come from? The Israel-Palestinian conflict has never been about land, but the impact of the change that both parties believe are agents of. The book however takes you back, as far as Noah's flood in tracing the roots of the Israel Palestinian conflict, especially in introducing who the ancient man Melkizedek was? Why is Melkizedek the real center of the Middle East crisis? The curtain raising concerns of this document also enumerate on the facts that ancient Bible Patriarchs were all great scientists. Abraham lectured Mathematics at the University of On in Egypt, and Joseph the Egyptian god Imhotep was their builder of the Pyramids. As the writer of Psalms 111:10 conferred "The fear of the LORD is (to) the beginning of wisdom", there is reason enough to conclude that knowledge has always been preserved and perpetuated by the protectors of the genuine laws of God - Israel.
