

Illustrated with eighty vintage city postcards made between the turn of the twentieth century and through the 1970s (with the emphasis on the first four decades), historical geographer, John A Jakle turns his attention to early-twentieth-century nocturnal views of American cities and to the role of the picture postcard in popular culture. Postcard images, the author writes, offered important visual fixes -- mental templates for visualising cities -- the vista of a downtown street at night, or a birds eye view of a vividly lit downtown, or the dramatic lighting of monuments and other architectural landmarks. As a result, the popularity and proliferation of the penny postcard influenced how Americans thought about cities as landscape displays.
